Bridging the Spreadsheet Gap

Are Your Spreadsheets Able to Take Your Business Where it Needs to Go?

Using ObjectBuilders FinancialStream you are able to effectively bridge the integration gap between your production systems, external data sources, and your accounting systems. We refer to this space as the "spreadsheet gap" and we specialize in automating transaction processes that are currently being handled via manual or semi-manual processes outside the current production systems.

The Spreadsheet Gap?

Most companies today have functionality gaps in and around their production and accounting systems. Gaps are tasks that these systems cannot perform. Most often, these gaps are due to your systems' inability to properly handle and manage the Financial Relationships that exist between your company and employees, your company and partners or your company and customers. These gaps, often filled with spreadsheets, include:

- Simple features that would be costly to develop in existing systems.
- Complex transactions that cannot be performed in the present system.
- Contract or financial obligations that change often or on a regular basis.

In most cases this functionality is critical to the successful growth of the organization.

Maximize Your ROI

Reduction and elimination of gaps where these time-consuming, costly, and error-prone manual touch points reside, allow us to deliver significant and rapid ROI. We also store, track, report and manage those transactions providing reconciliation capabilities and extending efficiencies and savings to the settlement or reconciliation component of the supply chain.

Turn a Bottleneck into a Strategic Advantage

Real-time access of information, flexible and adaptable business rules, rapid implementation and steep maintenance cost reductions all lead to increased productivity, efficiency and savings. Automation and collaboration drive down variables. Companies can now use these systems as strategic tools, turning a bottleneck into a strategic advantage.

ObjectBuilders FinancialStream is Financial Relationship Management (FRM) software that can automatically fill the gaps caused by your complex financial relationships.
